

Pench : In search of Jungle Book

Pench National Park —is tucked in the lower southern part of the Satpura hills. It gets its name from the Pench River that flows right through the park from north to south. The park sits on the MP-Maharashtra border, mainly in Seoni and Chhindwara districts of Madhya Pradesh. Total area of the park is 758 km². Out of this, 299 km² is the core zone — this includes Indira Priyadarshini Pench National Park and Mowgli Pench Sanctuary. The remaining 464 km² is the buffer area. About 90% of the park lies in Madhya Pradesh and 10% in Maharashtra. It is around 70 km from Nagpur city. This place has a rich history. Even Ain-i-Akbari talks about its natural beauty. And yes, this is the real jungle that inspired Rudyard Kipling's The Jungle Book. Pench was made the 19th Project Tiger reserve in India in 1992. The forest here is tropical moist deciduous type because of good rainfall. You will see lots of Saag, Ain, Arjun, Dhaoda, Palas, Amaltas, Mango, Jamun, Bamboo and Mahua trees. The tall trees and thick bamboo make the jungle look very dense and green. For wildlife, Pench has a good number of Royal Bengal Tigers, leopards, sloth bears, and Indian Dhols. Bird lovers will love it too — over 285 types of birds live here. You can spot Malabar Pied Hornbill, Indian Pitta, Osprey, Grey-headed Fishing Eagle and many more. In winter, the Pench reservoir attracts thousands of migratory birds like Brahminy Duck, Bar-headed Geese and Coots. Vultures like white-rumped, long-billed and king vulture are also seen here in good numbers. The park also has 50 fish species, 10 amphibians, 30 reptiles and lots of butterflies and insects.

Climate: Pench has hot summers, cool winters and good monsoon rains. Temperature can go as low as 2.2°C and as high as 44°C. Average rainfall is about 1173 mm, mostly during monsoon. Sometimes we also get rain from cyclones between November and February.
